Feature: Entrepreneurship in Syrian refugees in the UK and Jordan

In Jordan, a project titled: “sound out refugees’ success stories” aimed to write lyrics from refugees’ own entrepreneurial potential. Radi, a Turkish-Filipino who was born in Turkey and grew up in Jordan, is a PhD candidate in the School of Human and Health Sciences at the University of Huddersfield. Radi uses his research to focus on the wellbeing of refugees in Jordan. He has found that many refugees are skilful and find their entrepreneurial potential is not recognised in their home countries. Refugees may be perceived as having no expertise, or their existing professional skills and knowledge might be overlooked. Moreover, the inherent uncertainty in their lives makes the strongest case for using their skills and knowledge.

Radi attends sessions for new arrivals to identify the professional skills and knowledge they already possess. He then provides workshops for refugees on how to use their skills to find work in Jordan. Radi also has high-level relationships with refugees and non-governmental organisations to support positive outcomes for refugees. Radi, Dr John Lever and Dr Deema Refai work with local authorities in Kirklees, Bradford and Wakefield in settling refugees. He also has good relationships with governmental and non-governmental organisations to support positive outcomes for refugees.
